Chapter 1 by Elisabeth Ford

They call it the city of fog.

A city once driven by passion and dreams, but destroyed by the ones who thought they were forgotten.

They called themselves the Shadows. And I was one of them.

Chapter 2 by TheKillerKitten

The shadows were a group of people who had the need for attention. I was ashamed to be one but it was all I could do. If you lived in the city of fog you had two choices: Be a shadow or Be killed by the shadows. Life is unfair. I can't believe this all happened in two weeks, two weeks for the world to change.

Chapter 3 by Samui_san

Sometimes I wish I had died before they found me. If I had bled out on the rooftop of the tower on that fateful day, would they have found me worth the effort?

On hindsight, probably not.

Back then, it was easier to ignore the dark, to forget why we were there, to laugh and joke and shout and smile, to bask in our ignorance.

A pity, isn't it.

Chapter 4 by rickjomb

Now I wait, preying on the weaklings who grope aimlessly through the fog. I glide amidst the billowing clouds, knife traveling in beautifully hideous arcs of "retribution". But I'm different. I remember, and regret every life I take. And one day, maybe...

I was once ignorant like them, the innocent. Peaceful, a kind caring friend to those who loved me. But the Shadows hunted me down, chased me even up there, so high above the fog. I thought I was safe up there. But no. I realize now that the Shadows control everything. They beat me down, brought me to the very brink of death. And then they took me, and then they healed me, and then they made me. In the end, they broke me, and they won.

They always win.
